

The study indicated that Proximity, Similarity, Beauty, Reciprocity and Intimacy are the water factors which affect the attraction. The new research perspectives could be based in analysing multiple facial features which attracts the person and how the attraction is highly correlated with the likeliness and what are the features through the background could be explored of human being. Whereas, according to the social psychology, the Proximity among two people is a quality which affects and influences them environmentally through multiple factors (APA Dictionary of Psychology, n.d.). The study also indicated that the physical attractiveness plays a vital role. The attractions particularly based on multiple experiences and the characteristics which includes a physical appearance and the motivation which arises internally from someone attraction is the combination of these two factors.