

To calculate the resulting force when a steel ball of radius 6 cm is immersed in water, you can use Archimedes' principle. Finally, you can calculate the buoyant force using the density of water and the gravitational acceleration (typically 9.81 m/s^2).