

He encouraged his teammates to take care of their health and well-being, reminding them that they could only do their best work if they were feeling good.