that it is better to keep track of things using a system rather than your memory.Some examples are systems for capturing project and task information, commitments, ideas and thoughts memos, and other paperwork.is a very useful tool to remind you about time specific events such as appointments, meetings, and deadlines.It is also very good for scheduling or blocking out certain times for working on specific projects