

Turning things around (Section 11) The Burn Institute really helped Linman turn things around. The nonprofit group offers a host of services, including financial and emotional support for burn survivors and their families. «And that's what a burn survivor needs is support," Linman said. "Once you get past the hospital, and the physical, you try to get back to life. That support system of people who know exactly what you're going through and what you're gonna need; anticipating what you're gonna need, before you even know you need it." Linman has also gotten involved with the Phoenix Society, a national nonprofit peer-support group for burn survivors. What's more, she has become friends with a number of other firefighters who have suffered burn injuries "And we've all kind of taken this journey together, how to get back