– If you throw a stone in water of when a drop of water falls on a surface of still water, a disturbance will be occurred. This disturbance will transfer from a drop to another on the water surface which appears in the form of concentric circles. These concentric circles are known as water waves. The propagation of these circles on the water surface represents wave motion.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com