

. During the sizing procedure, the rated power of the hybrid system varies to find the most appropriate installation. The share of both generators in this rated power also varies. The hybrid system powers a submersible pump via a pump converter. During the operation of the generators, the pumped water is stored in an elevated water tank, which supplies a drip irrigation system. When battery storage is considered, it is part of the hybrid system.