

In this study, EF, MLR-APCS model, and Pb stable isotopes were integrated and applied for quantitative identification of anthropogenic trace metal sources in surface river sediments from a hilly agricultural watershed. For Pb, different sources were also quantitatively discriminated by isotopic analysis, which verified the EF and MLR-APCS results.