

This happens when the academic degree and field of specialization in the study are compatible with the job requirements from a scientific standpoint, and training in a field close to the job field before applying for it greatly helps the employee succeed in his work.