

Synthetic waxes have a more uniform structure than natural waxes. Dental waxes are thermoplastic polymer blends that soften and harden with temperature changes. They include mineral waxes like paraffin and microcrystalline, and vegetable waxes like candelilla and carnauba, which modify properties and control softening temperatures.