

Specimens are visualized because of differences in contrast (density) between specimen and surroundings.