

When a pidgin becomes so popular in the due course of interaction between the two different social groups with the passage of a long time that it is used as the language of the new generation of the interacting groups, it is called creole