

A number of studies have shown that chocolate consumption may reduce the risk of developing heart disease and cancer. In fact, ounce for ounce, dark chocolate and cocoa have more antioxidants than antioxidant-rich foods like blueberries and green tea. Scientists believe that antioxidants reduce the chances of developing these diseases.