

The term is generally used to describe data centers available to many users over the Internet.