

There are countless fascinating places around the world, each with its unique charm and allure, and I would want to visit many of them. However, one place that has always piqued my interest and captivated my imagination is Iceland. I guess the reason why I desire to visit Iceland has something to do with the fact that ever since I was a kid, I have always been amazed by the aurora borealis. And if I go there, I will go there between September and March because at this time the aurora borealis is clear.
