

In the beginning, most local laws have a clear purpose or reason; even so, after many years, these same regulations can seem very strange or unusual. The law in some Chinese towns doesn't allow a man to give a woman a chicken leg during a meal; he can give her other chicken parts, but not a leg. And in Worland, Wyoming (a state in the United States), no married man may go camping alone or with his friends; he has to take along his wife! How is this custom legal?
