

Once upon a time, there lived a lazy grasshopper and ants in a far forest. The ants worked all day long collecting food from the fields and storing it in their larder. Days went by and the lazy grasshopper did nothing but strolling around and making fun of the hard-working ants. The grasshopper was shivering in cold and couldn't find anything to eat. The grasshopper gathered all his strength and started walking looking for somewhere to hide from the cold. He suddenly, came across the ants' house and he decided to knock on the door to ask for help but he wasn't really sure that the ants would help him. A while later, the door was open and an ant stood there looking at the miserable grasshopper that was about to faint. It was cold and snow covered everything.
