

Or disruption of health care information is generally caused by some form of malware, defined as software that is written to “infect” and subsequently harm a host computer system. The best-known form of malware is the computer virus, but there are others.