

You're absolutely right! A scientist who comes up with a groundbreaking theory (creativity) but needs to conduct experiments, gather data, and publish their findings to advance knowledge in the field (innovation). A chef who invents a unique recipe (creativity) but must also develop a strategy to market and distribute their dishes to customers (innovation). Here are some examples to illustrate this point:

1.2.3.