Stress significantly increases the risk of developing autoimmune diseases such as rheumatoid arthritis, lupus, and multiple sclerosis, and worsens existing conditions. This is because stress triggers inflammation and disrupts immune system function.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com