

When people talk about the most important developments of civilization they usually mention writing. If you are a good hunter, you will draw the animals you've hunted to show people. Such drawings are among the earliest examples of writing.