

Logistics specifically refers to the transport of the goods, materials, or products, which includes the management of freight, storage, packaging, and inventory. Examples: 1. Air transport for international trade: o This kind of transport is the fastest and it's the best for transporting sensitive items because it has high level of security. 2. Sea transport for international trade: o This kind is the best for transporting large items and it's not that expensive as air transport.