

The author's intention in this phrase is that the incredible development of technology in recent years has significantly affected people's lives, especially adolescents who have had the phone as an irreplaceable tool, that each of them is lost without that phone and that the conversation that is face to face may no longer exist between them now.