

This allows data transfer between the two computers, enabling communication, file sharing, and other network-based activities.