

Angel Reese Makes Surprise Appearance For Musical Icon At Lollapalooza .Angel Reese and the Chicago Sky officially restarted practice on Thursday after nearly two weeks of vacation during the month-long break for the 2024 Paris Olympics. Not only did she make the All-Star team, but she also broke the record for most consecutive double-doubles in WNBA history with 15. Reese and the Sky will be back in action on Thursday, August 15, when they take on the Phoenix Mercury. Reese then joined Megan for her next song 'Where Them Girls At,' dancing on stage with the artist. Megan Thee Stallion has won a total of 52 awards, including three Grammys, six BET awards, and four American Music awards. Megan Thee Stallion is also known for her hit songs like 'Savage,' 'Body,' and 'WAP,' a collaboration with Cardi B. Reese was drafted with the No. 7 pick in the 2024 WNBA draft. The first headline of the festival included hip-hop star Megan Thee Stallion. After practice, on Thursday night, Reese attended the Chicago music festival 'Lollapalooza.' During the concert, Reese posted a video on her Instagram story of her running on stage and surprising the famous rapper.
