

First and foremost, no one should be forced to witness and experience the horrors of war against their will. The trauma of seeing friends and fellow soldiers die violent deaths, the constant fear and stress, and the inhumane conditions took an immense psychological toll. Forcing unwilling Australians to endure this trauma is wrong.