

Fasteners, or fastening devices, are used to create secure joints between two or more components.