

The heat pipe has three section *evaporator *adiabatic *and condenser. Then the solution is pumped back again to the evaporator by way of the wick capillary actions in the middle section. If the evaporator {area (L)} is subjected to a heat supply, the liquid inside vaporizes and the strain in that section rises.[5]