

Language can show the class of someone in the society. Social intimacy and social distance between members of a speech community vary according to such features as age, sex, social class, and social roles. High class people are people who have high education, politeness, important people, or maybe sometimes they are rich people. Addressee as an Influence on Style