

The aim of studying the demographics of populations is to gain a deeper understanding of the characteristics, composition, and dynamics of human populations.