Since n is dimensionless, the presence of the factor M shows that the molar refraction is a type of molar volume and is an additive property and also partly a constitutive property.For a study of the molar refractions of a large number of compounds, atomic refractions and different bond contributions are obtained.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com