

Contingency arises when a need of additional amount to the previous stockholders of the acquired company. The contingent consideration in an acquisition must be measured and recorded at fair value. Contingent consideration can be classified into: contingent consideration as an equity contingent consideration as a liability