

Modeling in three dimensions Creating digital representations of interior spaces using software like AutoCAD, SketchUp, or Revit is known as three-dimensional (3D) modeling. The study investigated the effectiveness of smart technologies like automated lighting systems, HVAC systems, and responsive materials in designing flexible and energy-saving spaces. Methods for Simulating Processes Simulation uses computer programs to study how interior spaces respond to varying environmental conditions.