

According to a previous report, combining a soft and hard (hybrid) approach is the most effective way to address security and operational issues. This iterative approach will encourage long-term resilience and progress.