

Hyaluronic acid, rich in OH groups, attracts water, forming an incompressible substance that facilitates lubrication in joint synovial fluids through negative charge-induced repulsion between carbohydrate units.