Location–Based Services, or LBS, are gaining popularity as the Internet of Things (IoT) develops quickly. To guarantee the system's authentication security, we first build a robust identity verification mechanism in this study. The development of LBS for more extensive services has been hampered by the extreme difficulties in building trust between users and service providers as a result.