

The most important holiday in Chinese culture is the Chinese New Year, known as the Lunar New Year, and it is one of the most important celebrations in China, starting from the first lunar month and ending on the fifteenth day of the month, known as the Lantern Festival, and the night of the holiday is called Chushi.