

Clean water sources were scarce, and bathing was typically infrequent, leading to poor personal hygiene and increased susceptibility to diseases.