

The concept of human capital appeared in economics research at the first time. Schultz believes that human capital is the social determinants of further, but to acquire human capital is not without cost, human capital requires a scarce resource. At the 50 century, American economist Schultz has point out that people spend on education, health; vocational training, immigration and investment are kinds of conscious investment behavior. These behavior forms a human capital investment.