

Chronic GERD (gastroesophageal reflux disease) can cause damage to the tissue lining the lower portion of the esophagus and proximal portion of the stomach resulting in the development of cancer at the GE junction