

There it stood patiently, gobbling the animals, one by one, the dark unsolved mystery...It also had a white fruit which was everyone's favourite, as it changes into what your body needs when you touch it. So, it can be a coconut for some one and a carrot or lettuce for someone else Hamad, a young boy from the village was clearing some branches that fell from the tree after the storm last night He saw five men in black suits talking to the Mayor of the village. That must be the reason why the magical tree was behaving like a monster The stunned villagers couldn't believe what Hamad and his team revealed. The branches bore juicy colourful fruits. So, whilst he was looking after his grandmother Hassan was watching the men offload piles and piles of wired material. They worked together as a great team who had great faith in their leader Hamad. It was Hamad's shift, as night crept upon the village, a cold wind blew and the roofs struggled to stay put, Hamad was trying very hard not to shiver from the wind and the cold. He could see grandma was worried too. The next morning Hamad and grandma told villagers what he witnessed, but all their efforts went in vain as no one believed them. upheld for years...Far away from the city and its hustle and bustle, stood the beautiful village of Mehdi. They disappeared at night and found as a lump of hardened slime the next morning. Before this all stated. It resembled a rainbow, so beautiful that it lured everyone towards it. The fruits were so delicious and unique. In the summer, the red fruits tasted like watermelon and during the winter they tasted like cranberry milk shake. Being old, she struggled to maintain the house, so Hamad was all what left for her after his parents passed away in an unfortunate lightening that strook them as they were walking by the magical tree one day. He heard a huge "ROARRRR!!!!" It was a terrible noise, the voice was deep and gruff Hamad was petrified. He knew the Mayor is trying to hide something and its time for him and his team to reveal it. They must find out what was that material the men in suits were burying around the land The next day Hamad and his team started collecting samples and testing them. The samples Hamad took from the broken tree branches revealed that the tree was contaminated by the chemical waste. The villagers were so angry that they wanted to take down the Mayor and beat him up. Hamad calmed them down and suggested calling the authority to deal with the Mayor's corruption. Hamad also expected that the villagers will be worrying about the tree and wanted to take it down. So, he had already planned ahead to have teams of people clearing the waste to support the authority in restoring the healthy soil of the village. It took months for the tree to be in its happy form and never turning into a monster again. they said.
