

The story of an educated young man who was passionate about reading. When he returned to his homeland, Saudi Arabia, he encountered a culture different from the one in which he was raised. The young man reads books older than his age, which has contributed to the maturity of his mind beyond that of his peers. But the television's disruption for quite some time prompted him to check out his father's library.