

Hey girls, how are you? I hope you are well. Today I will share with you a slice of my life that really changed me a lot from before for the better. I hope you listen carefully and also enjoy the details of this story. Let's move on. In December 2018, like any other high school graduate, I was eagerly awaiting admission to the university I had always dreamed of. I had applied to four universities in my city in the hope that I would be accepted into one of them. Indeed, God gave me good news of acceptance into one of these universities, majoring in aeronautical engineering. I was truly the happiest creature on earth at that time, but my happiness did not last long.
