

Hyaluronic acid is a naturally occurring molecule found in connective tissues, especially in the skin. Additionally, hyaluronic acid is involved in tissue regeneration and wound healing by promoting cell proliferation and tissue reconstruction.