

In essence, the data indicates a marginal decline in the enrollment of male students studying foreign languages over the twenty-year span, juxtaposed with a steady and notable escalation in female student numbers, culminating in their surpassing of male enrollment