

The results show that the vinegar solution with baking soda has an effective effect in creating bubbles during the reaction. On the other hand, the results showed that the oil does not interact with water due to its low density. The hypothesis that vinegar would not react with baking soda was incorrect, as it became clear through the experiment that vinegar plays an essential role in the reaction to create a beautiful and colorful lava lamp.