

Part 3 : Diversity of Antibody Classes and their function ; Immunoglobulins are produced by activated B lymphocytes and form a critical component of adaptive immunity. This structural and functional diversity enables highly efficient and adaptable immune defense mechanisms. Human antibodies are divided into five classes with distinct roles: o IgM initiates primary immune responses and strongly activates complement.