

Thus, early novelists such as Richardson and Fielding introduced realism and psychological interest into the novel.