

Introduction: The nursing profession is considered one of the oldest and noblest professions ever to have appeared in the life of humanity, as it is one of the humanitarian professions. The Omani Nursing Association is one of the bodies that was established in 2017 and specializes in improving the conditions of members in the professional field. Therefore Countries have resorted to adopting the strategy for the advancement of nursing and midwifery 2022–2030, in cooperation with Arab member states and the United Nations Population Fund, in order to ensure the availability of a workforce that seeks to achieve or provide high–quality health services, and thus this supports the achievement of sustainable development and comprehensive health coverage. The ethics of the nursing profession have a significant impact on the local and global levels, with a significant and noticeable impact from both a practical and professional standpoint, as the ethics that characterize practitioners of the nursing profession are reflected in their dealings with the beneficiaries of this service, either positively or negatively. There is no doubt that the ethics of the nursing profession is responsible for determining the behavior of the worker in his profession, whether this work is wrong or correct, in accordance with special principles and rules, and establishes a humane and civilized concept related to the profession and determines the behavioral controls for the nursing profession. The Sultanate of Oman also has a group of professional bodies that regulate the nursing profession, for example: The General Directorate of Nursing Affairs is one of the bodies located in Muscat Governorate and was established in 1979. This body seeks to achieve various goals, the most prominent of which is cooperation between the media and the association in order to enhance the role of the nursing profession in society. From the above, we see that the Sultanate of Oman has paid great attention to the nursing profession and has imposed many behaviors, etiquettes, and ethics that must be possessed by those who practice the nursing profession. The Sultanate of Oman has been keen on whoever practices the nursing profession to He has these ethics in order to preserve the health of society and to provide high–quality medical services to individuals and society. Investment in the field of midwifery and nursing is one of the strategies that are beneficial to ensuring the provision of high–quality and efficient health services to the population. Conclusion :– At the conclusion of our article, we touched on the fact that the nursing profession is one of the oldest professions that society needs, and it was necessary for countries to pay attention to this profession because it is considered one of the important professions, and therefore whoever practices it must possess some special ethics and morals. Multiple aspects and thus benefit citizens and members.