

The USB Switchblade required that one simply inserts the USB drive on the target computer and it would automatically and silently steal information about the computer, password hashes and any other data